

Communicating with Policymakers: How to become an effective voice for science

June 11, 2018 from 11 am to 1 pm

At the local, state and national levels, researchers can have a positive impact through dialogue with policymakers. Although more important now than ever, doing so effectively requires a unique set of communication competencies. Join us to learn from four panelists who have extensive experience informing public policy and advancing science. The workshop will begin with an overview, by Glenn Ruskin, on how researchers can have a voice in the policymaking process. Over lunch, panelists will share lessons learned in a discussion with participants.

Glenn Ruskin
ACS
Director, External Affairs &
Communications

Seth Cohen
UC San Diego
Chemistry &
Biochemistry
Professor

Barbara Sawrey
UC San Diego
Chemistry &
Biochemistry
Professor

Rush Holt
AAAS
Chief Executive Officer

<http://researchcommunications.ucsd.edu>

Location TBA. Space is limited.

Registration is required.

Funded by a grant from the Gordon and Betty Moore Foundation .